

ABSTRACT

Electronic coupons are generated representative of benefits for which a customer is eligible. The benefits available to the customer are discovered. At least one transaction product is discovered. Each transaction product is identified for which benefits are available to the customer. The value of the benefit is calculated for the identified products. An electronic coupon is issued for the value of the benefit.